The Town Line Bridge.

John McDonald has the east approach to the bridge over the river, on the town line near John F. McDonald's, completed, with the exception of the railing. He has the short span removed and is about ready to commence raising the timbers for the new truss. The timbers of the old truss were very tender from age, and so rotten at the ends that they would not bear their own weight, and the great wonder is that the bridge did not give way long before it did. From an examination of the piles and covering in the foundations of the main span we think the commissioners made a mistake in not condemning the entire structure. They are so rotten above the water that it is evident that it will not be but a few years or so before it will have to be overhauled. If it had been done now the structure would have been a substantial one for years, as it is, it will be defective until these abutments are put in proper shape. The piles below the water are apparently as sound as ever, and if they had been cut off down to the water's edge and built up to the proper height with cedar timber they would have been as good as ever. It is evident from the wind in sides of the main truss that either these abutments are settling or else that the bridge was not true when first erected. It would have cost less to have made these abutments substantial now while the work of rebuilding the bridge was being done, than at any future time, and as a matter of economy to the three towns interested we think it should have been done.

Narrow Escape.

Two fishermen, Burt Omer and Wm. Olmstead, started from Detour on Wednesday morning last, on their way home toward the lighthouse. The wind was boisterous and the sea treacherous. About three miles away three compasses followed swiftly, gathering force as they struck the little craft, the last one beaming it. The two men however got to the surface and stuck to the keel. The mast was whipped out when Omer made for it. The wreck was seen from shore, and W. Moyle and two others courageously went to the rescue. They rowed steadily, encountering a wild sea, but the men were saved. Olmstead in a few moments more must have perished. Camphor and whisky rubbing with other necessary care brought him to.

Mr. S. LeGault's residence east of the river is nearing a finish. It stands on a plot of about 4 acres inclined to drainage and is slightly. The style is of no distinct design in architecture, but is a combination of several, comfort and taste readily uniting. The cellar is of the same outline as above, and lighted through a trap. The first floor has a spacious parlor, sitting room and dining room, with the kitchen, several large bed rooms and bath room. The second floor is all arranged into rooms, those over the kitchen having a private stairway for the help. It is flanked by a turret. The roof hoods the upper windows. With its gable points and bay windows it is picturesque and comfortable and ranks as one of our best residences. The heating appliances are of the latest, the smoke escaping in chimneys neatly setting off the building. Mrs. LeGault said to the reporter: "I think it is pretty and I shall be so delighted when it is my home."

S. E. F. Tolson's catch of fresh fish shipped from Cheboygan this week amounts to twenty-four tons, the tug Mary A. Day, Capt. R. H. Mosier, bringing in about ten tons and the tug Messenger, Capt. Matheson, about fourteen tons.

The Rockford Watch Co. in its dealings is quite a controversy between Mr. Fexer and Mr. Limpert, jewelers of this town. This number of the TRIBUNE has Mr. Fexer's rejoinder. Our readers are watching it with interest.

Moses McGowan in the corner of the Melville block has a meat market. Go there for good steak, beef and pork, mutton, roast, chop and sausage.

Services of the Independent church at 7 p. m., at the Opera House. The best of music and a genuine welcome to all.

On the Benton House register for Wednesday there were 23 guests, and Thursday 22.

CHEBOYGAN CASH STORE.

To those of my customers who have favored me with their patronage, and to the public in general, I most respectfully make the following announcement that after this date I will sell goods for cash only. Having carefully studied the interests of my customers in every respect I find that it is for their interest as well as mine to buy for cash. When dealer can buy his goods for cash he can invariably buy goods at a much lower price and consequently he can sell to his customers at from 10 to 15 per cent less. All that is required is a little management on the part of those who buy goods to receive this benefit and save at least from $10 to $15 per month. To be convinced read the following list of prices and it will convince you that the only way to get rich is to buy for cash:
